This is the second album of Swedish singer Songwriter Anouschka Pearlman who came to us earlier with an album back in 2006. Today she's back but not like the previous time with a band, but this time with a 100% solo project. She did not only write all the tunes on this album but also recorded all instruments herself as well. Thirteen songs long this lady takes you on a ride to discover the best of her tunes written over the past years. But since Anouschka is doing everything by herself it turns out that his records comes with a feeling that is best described as "doing an acoustic session". The sound is a bit laid back, monotone at times and some of these songs would benefit from the uplift of a real band.

Nevertheless Hollywood Ending has a couple of nice moments to give away. Take for instance a nice blues tune like "Buried Alive", the good "Hollywood Ending" or the excellent "Trouble" and you know that that you are in for some treats. "I see the Devil In My Angel's Eyes" is without doubt one of the better lyrics I heard this year... strong and straightforward as many of her songs and a lot of her music! Anouschka Pearlman might not be the most productive singer songwriter around but every time a record of here is released, I'm eagerly waiting to hear the result!
